PUBLIC LIBRARY

TO YOU THE READER

CONGRATULATIONS! You have become part of a 65-year old tradition by picking up this copy of the 1994 Books for the Teen Age. This list has been especially prepared for teenagers in New York City since 1929. It is a browsing list and the books are arranged by subjects you have asked for when visiting the library. There are approximately 1250 books on the list. This year approximately 450 books have been removed from the list and the same amount added. The new titles are marked with an asterisk (*).

You will find stories to scare you, make you laugh or cry, or show you new ways to work through a problem; extraordinary people to meet who are doing unusual and exciting things; and books of information on subjects too numerous to mention. Lots to inform you and many also for your enjoyment!

Many of the titles listed are available in recorded format or Braille from the Andrew Heiskell Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped. For information on this service and a special large print edition of Books for the Teen Age, call 212-206-5400.

All of the books have been read and selected by Young Adult Librarians who work with teenagers in the branch libraries. Because you vary so much in your interests, maturity and reading ability, the books on the list vary greatly in difficulty and depth. They may be shelved in various places in the library. Ask your librarian to help you find a book you are particularly interested in reading. Let your librarian know whether you like the book or not. We are interested in your opinion. It will help us in selecting books for Young Adult collections and in preparing the Books for the Teen Age list next year.

The books on the list are always on display in the Office of Young Adult Services and at the Nathan Straus Young Adult Library, Donnell Library Center, 20 West 53rd Street. This library also has a large collection of books and magazines especially for teens. Exhibits and activities in which you can participate are frequently scheduled at this center.

Each New York Public Library branch has many of the books on this list and other books of special interest to teenagers. They also have programs for teenagers from time to time. If you want advice about books and reading, or if you want the schedules of programs in all branches, call the Office of Young Adult Services, (212) 340-0908.

May this 1994 BOOKS FOR THE TEEN AGE bring you many hours of good reading.

THE CREATIVE SPIRIT

OWL IN LOVE by Patrice Kindl
Houghton Mifflin, 1993

"I am in love with Mr. Lindstrom, my science teacher. I found out where he lives and every night I perch on a tree branch outside his bedroom window and watch him sleep. He sleeps in his underwear: Fruit of the Loom, size 34 . . .

I am Owl. It is my name as well as my nature . . . Let me be clear. I would not wish you to misunderstand: by night I seek my living in owl shape, among the fields and woods surrounding my home. By day I am an ordinary girl (more or less) attending the local high school. I am no vampire in a fairy tale, to be ruled by the sun or moon; I can shift to either shape at any time of night or day."

THE MAGIC CIRCLE by Donna Jo Napoli
Dutton Children's Books, 1993

" 'There is a difference,' I say, my heart beating faster, 'between fighting devils in the daily battle of souls and seeking out devils for a battle of choice.'

Bala squats on the ground and looks hard at the dirt. She picks up a stick and draws a large circle. 'But if you could chase devils away without endangering yourself, you would do it, wouldn't you?' . . . My heart is now in my throat. My breath comes hard. 'I would heal if I could.' "

MAKE LEMONADE by Virginia Euwer Wolff
Henry Holt and Company, 1993

" 'So, you want to hear the job I can have if I want it? It's babysitting, 2 little kids, evenings, so their mother can go to work. They're Jeremy & Jilly. I'd be their regular, their main sitter. I'd be in charge.' . . .

'The kids are real cute,' I say. 'It'll be my money for college, like you always say,' I say.

'What's their mother do?' my Mom wants to know. 'She does factory work evenings,' I say. . . . I don't say she's 17."

SCIENCE

WATER WARS by Olga Cossi
New Discovery Books, 1993

"Every living thing on this unique planet has a water connection. Our bodies are 80 percent water. It lubricates our systems, keeps them free from waste, and maintains a normal body temperature. Trees are 70 percent water and are as reliant upon it as we are. Every living cell is water dependent, is water sustained, and therefore is vitally affected by the quality and quantity of water available. Water, in fact, instead of love, is what really makes the world go 'round."

A BONE FROM A DRY SEA by Peter Dickinson
Delacorte, 1993

"Vinny's dreams were dreams of heat, of a shimmering marsh which somehow she had to lead the others across. There was one safe path. If you stepped off, the crocodiles would get you. She was the one who knew the way. She walked confidently between the reed beds and the others followed. (What others? They were vague in her mind, but she knew they were there, though she mustn't look around.) Something on the path. A flat white bone with a hole in it - a sign someone had left for her. She stared into the mists ahead for her helper. No. And when she looked down again, the bone was broken. And she'd forgotten the path. If she looked through the hole, she would see it again. Someone behind her was reaching to take it away and she would be lost and the crocodiles were coming nearer. They knew . . ."

A DANCING MATRIX by Robin Marantz Henig
Alfred A. Knopf, 1993

"New viruses have always emerged, since the beginning of recorded time. But the pace might well be quickening as we continue to encroach on nature in ever-more insidious ways. Human actions from forest clearing to genetic recombination are making viral catastrophes increasingly more likely; the result could well be the ecological equivalent of a nuclear holocaust."

HERE/NOW

HAVING OUR SAY by Sarah and A. Elizabeth Delany with Amy Hill Hearth
Kodansha, 1993

"Bessie and I have been together since time began, or so it seems. Bessie is my little sister, only she's not so little.

She is 101 years old, and I am 103.

People always say they'd like to live to be one hundred, but no one really expects to, except Bessie. She always said she planned to be as old as Moses. And when Bessie says she's going to do something, she does it. Now, I think Moses lived to 120. So I told Bessie that if she lives to 120, then I'll just have to live to 122 so I can take care of her."

HERO OF LESSER CAUSES by Julie Johnston
Little, Brown and Company, 1993

"It started off as a peaceful, plodding kind of summer, the summer of 1946. We didn't know that our lives would charge wildly out of control . . .

My brother was crying! 'It's all right,' I said . . . I scrambled to him and cradled his head on my lap. He winced in pain. He looked up at me with something in his eyes I'd never seen there before. He looked defeated.

'I think I'm sick,' he said. His voice was hollow.

Channing closed its public swimming pool when it was learned that Patrick Connor had come down with a severe case of polio. Everyone in town said he would die."

I HAD SEEN CASTLES by Cynthia Rylant
Harcourt Brace and Company, 1993

" 'There are other ways, you know, to solve differences. We could have kept out of it,' she answered.

I stared at her in disbelief. 'You're against the war?'

She lifted her chin and firmed her mouth. 'I'm against the war,' she said quietly. 'War.' . . . 'If you die, you miss everything. You won't be back and you'll miss everything.'

Just as softly, I answered, 'If "everything" here is that important, then I'd damned well better go.' "

ONE WORLD

SHADOW OF THE DRAGON by Sherry Garland
Harcourt Brace and Company, 1993

"Danny remembered very little about Vietnam. He had been born after the war and left when he was six. His worst memory only haunted him once in a while, like the time his American sponsor, Mr. MacIntyre, took him to Galveston and they boarded a fishing boat at night. The rocking boat, the dark waves, had suddenly filled his heart with blind terror and flashes of memory - his mother's arms squeezing him and baby Kim against her trembling body as a large boat sliced through the dark water, closer and closer until he could smell the diesel fuel and hear the sailors talking. Only much later, when he was ten, did he learn that they had fled Vietnam at night on a small fishing boat . . .

Danny pushed the memory back. He didn't want to remember anything about Vietnam - that was gone, no longer part of his life. He wanted to be an American now."

MAKING THIRTEEN COLONIES by Joy Hakim
Oxford University Press, 1993

"How many Puritans do you know? Don't think too hard. The answer is zero. Puritans are like dinosaurs: they are extinct . . .

The Puritans came to the New World to try and build a godly community where they could live close to perfect lives. No human beings have ever been able to do that, but the Puritans tried.

To make their community pure, the Puritans expected everyone to act like a spy and report any neighbor who did or said anything wrong. Can you see how that might make you a little uncomfortable around your neighbors? Maybe that helped cause the Puritans' downfall. Or perhaps it was their seriousness that did them in."

HAVELI by Suzanne Fisher Staples
Alfred A. Knopf, 1993

"'Nazir has tried to find a suitable match for Zabo since she was ten,' Shabanu said. 'But no decent family wants a son, even a lowborn son, to marry Nazir's daughter' . . .

Rahim remained silent. Among Pakistan's landowning classes it was the custom for cousins to marry in order to keep land within the family . . .

'You can't ask me to persuade my only friend to marry an idiot boy who would give her idiot children!' said Shabanu.

'Zabo will marry anyone her father wants her to marry,' said Rahim."

ACTION AND ADVENTURE

BACK FROM TUICHI by Yossi Ghinsberg
Random House, 1993

"Suddenly I understood where I was: I had entered the canyon and was being swept swiftly toward the treacherous Mal Paso San Pedro. The raft bounced from wall to wall. It crashed into the rocks, tilted on its sides, was tossed over falls, and swept through foaming rapids. I held on desperately, closing my eyes and praying. God. God. Then the raft dove under again, taking me with it. I rammed into a rock so violently that I was twice thrown into the air, landing in the water, vulnerable to the torments of the river, sucked down to its depths. If I hit another rock, I would be smashed to pieces."

MY FIRST CAR by James Lecesne
Crown, 1993

"'It was a piece of junk. (. . . a black, beat-up '64 Corvair) but like every teenager, I had to have a car. In my neighborhood, where I grew up, you had to have a car before you could have a girl. In Los Angeles, even to this day, if you don't have a car, you're not portable. For a teenager, a car is a symbol of your masculinity; especially among Chicanos, it's a big thing. The girls would always want to find out about you, but instead of asking, What's his name? or How tall is he? or How attractive? they'd want to know what kind of car you had. I knew big, fat, ugly guys with good-looking cars and good-looking girls. Me, I dated Juanita and Mary Alice, girls who were awfully ugly, and that was due to that damn Corvair.'" (Paul Rodriguez, Comedian)

I WAS A TEENAGE PROFESSIONAL WRESTLER by Ted Lewin
Orchard, 1993

"In the summer of 1952, at age seventeen, I became a professional wrestler. The work paid my way through art school and, for fifteen years, helped support me until I was able to make a living as a full-time illustrator and writer . . .

It was a great life, crowded with unforgettable characters: college men, working men with bleached hair, ugly men and men who could have been movie stars, huge fat men in outrageous costumes, men from all over the world.

Wrestlers radiate a bizarre charm . . . They make you look sideways at what they're saying . . . After all, they've been around."
